

A group of people is walking through a large, dimly lit tunnel. The tunnel has a curved, ribbed interior and is illuminated by overhead lights and the flashlights of the people. In the center, a group of people is walking towards the camera, their flashlights creating bright beams of light. In the background, a train is visible, and several other people are standing on the right side of the tunnel. The overall atmosphere is dark and mysterious.

BAFTA award-winners Søren Sveistrup (The Killing) and Adam Price (Borgen) join forces with Meta Louise Foldager Sørensen (A Royal Affair) on this tense, nerve-racking crime thriller.

Copenhagen, 2017. Fifteen innocent people are held hostage underground in a subway train by three masked, armed men.

A terror taskforce led by Philip Nørgaard (Johannes Lassen) and Louise Falck (Sara Hjort Ditlevsen) is dispatched to rescue them. Reporter Naja Toft (Paprika Steen) acts as a go-between with the hostages and police as the savvy captors bait the press with information about the pasts of each of their hostages. As a media frenzy ensues, the country finds itself divided on whether or not to negotiate with the terrorists.

Over the course of eight days, growing fear and desperation grip Denmark while those trapped underground lose all hope for survival.
